

I also continue to believe we should take the steps to stimulate the economy that the administration failed to take earlier this year. To encourage businesses to invest, we should raise the bonus for investing in new equipment from 30 percent to 45 percent—a 50 percent increase—but do it through June 30 of next year only. This will do what the administration's stimulus has failed to do so far: persuade businesses to get off the fence and put their money to work in our economy.

We also should act to prevent painful property tax increases and education cuts at the State level, giving States relief to deal with what the Wall Street Journal this week said is a $58 billion budget gap. The Senate has already acted to provide relief in the quickest possible way—through the Medicaid program—and there is no excuse for further delay.

Last but not least, we have to change a terrible reality: At a time when the index of Help Wanted listings is at historic lows, we are set to cut off unemployment benefits for nearly a million out-of-work Americans just three days after Christmas. These are good people who want nothing more than to get back to work. Last September, 800,000 Americans had been out of work for 6 months or more. By December, that total will have climbed to over 2 million. We have to do what is right for the workers who have done the worst in this economy and extend their benefits. They are sure to pump the money right back into our economy.

I call on the President and my colleagues in both parties to put politics aside and come together immediately to take these urgent steps to get our economy going again. Americans deserve nothing less from us.

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, as the ranking member of the Special Committee on Aging, and in honor of this year's Hispanic Heritage Month, I rise today to give special recognition to 104-year-old Jose Rodriguez, who recently has been determined to be the Oldest Hispanic American now living in my State of Idaho. In honoring one man, Jose Rodriguez, this Nation honors all Americans of Hispanic descent.

Hispanic Heritage Month began on September 15 a day which marks the anniversary of independence for five Latin American countries Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua. Mexico achieved its independence on September 16, and Chile on September 18.

This being a Nation of immigrants, it is only fitting that Jose Rodriguez is himself an immigrant from Mexico. Some of us have been blessed by being born in Idaho. Others, like Jose, have been wise and bold enough to journey, sometimes great distances, to claim these blessings. He chose Idaho because Idaho was in his heart a place where family, faith, and freedom flourish.

Jose was born in Doctor Arrollo, in the State of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, on March 19, 1898. In 1913, at the tender age of 15, he joined in the Mexican revolution led by Pancho Villa. He arrived in the United States in 1922 and settled in Eagle Pass, TX. He married his wife Guadalupe, who he knew from childhood, in 1929. They had seven children together: Five sons and two daughters. While his wife passed away a few years ago and he misses her, Mr. Rodriguez enjoys his more than 80 grandchildren and numerous great-grandchildren, who carry on his legacy.

In the 1950s, Mr. Rodriguez moved his family to Idaho where he worked as a farm worker and crew leader for most of his life. According to one of his sons, the hallmark of Jose's life has been his generosity. He is a man known to help others, especially those in need.

Still living independently today, Mr. Rodriguez spends summers in Idaho with his son Meliton and winters in Arizona with his daughter Marina. Jose still cares for himself, takes daily walks, and credits his long life to, in his words, "God's good will and living a healthy life." That is what aging should be.

That type of wonderfully positive outlook have no doubt contributed to his longevity.

When Jose Rodriguez was born, Idaho had only been a State for 7 years and 8 months. That year, the first photographs taken with a flashbulb were produced and 1,000 automobiles were manufactured, up from a total of 100 the year before. Around that time, a child born in the United States was expected to live less than fifty years. Jose, a child born in Mexico, has more than doubled that expectation.

Jose is part of a large and growing population of Hispanic Americans throughout the nation and especially in Idaho. Within the past decade, the Hispanic population in Idaho has doubled from approximately 50,000 in 1990 to more than 100,000 today. Nationwide, there are now some 26 million people of Hispanic origin in the United States approximately ten percent of the American population. We honor their contributions during Hispanic Heritage Month, which have maintained America's tradition as a rich, cultural melting pot and strengthened our shared national values.

Jose is a trendsetter in another way. Following his example, the number of centenarians those 100 years old or older has grown to 50,000 Americans today. In the next 50 years, according to Census Bureau estimates, there will be between 800,000 and one million people 100 years or older living in the United States.

Jose Rodriguez is a man of honor. It is with great pride that I rise today to recognize him, and I thank him for allowing me this privilege.

LOW-FAT, LOW-CALORIE CUISINE

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today at the weekly Thursday Republican

Lunch group, Lifestyle Advantage from Highmark Blue Cross/Blue Shield, in collaboration with Dr. Dean Ornish, served a gourmet, low-calorie, virtually no-fat, lunch with the following menu: Tuscan Vegetable Minestrone, Roasted Vegetable Lasagne, Caesar Salad, Apple-Raisin Strudel, Vanilla ala mode with caramel sauce.

As explained by Ms. Anna Silberman and Ms. Marlene Janco, Executives of Lifestyle Advantage/Highmark, the lunch contained approximately 450 calories compared to about 850 calories with regular ingredients.

There was real enthusiasm among the 27 Republican Senators who were very complimentary about the taste, elegance, and healthy content of the cuisine.

When one senator was being served the apple-raisin strudel with vanilla ice cream—actually ice milk—topped by caramel sauce and was told it was fat-free and low-calorie, he replied:

"Next they'll want to sell me the Brooklyn Bridge."

When assured that it was fat-free and low-calorie, he was very much impressed. Other senators marveled at the tastiness of the caesar salad, especially contrasted to its ordinarily high-caloric content. The Tuscan vegetable minestrone had a special quality with roasted vegetables. Again, the roasted vegetables in the lasagne made it especially tasty.

The Capitol dining service is now considering adding to the regular menu on both the House and Senate sides low-fat, low-calorie tasty cuisine as demonstrated by today's lunch.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

IN RECOGNITION OF JOSEPH TORREZ

• Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, today I honor the accomplishments of Principal Joseph Torrez of Tucumcari, NM, who is in the Nation's capital today to be recognized as the 2002 New Mexico National Distinguished Principal of the Year. He was one of 63 principals from across the country who will be honored by the United States Department of Education and the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

Joseph is a product of the New Mexico higher education system, having received both his undergraduate degree and Master's degree from New Mexico Highlands University. Since completing his master's degree, he has dedicated his life to educating New Mexico's children. As a language arts teacher at Taos High School, Thoreau High School and Memorial Middle School in Las Vegas, NM, he has touched the hearts and minds of his students, while generating interest and enthusiasm in learning.

Three years ago Joseph agreed to move from the classroom to the principal's office. In this role he has shown leadership skills that have earned him the respect of parents and teachers alike.
